

Tufted Ear Marmoset are born in Animal Rescue ZooAve

The Tufted Ear Marmoset is one of the smallest primates in the world and native to Brazil, a female gave birth in our park two beautiful and healthy young. Precisely that is a characteristic of the species, since it is very common that twins are born. One of the most curious facets of his behavior during the breeding, is that the father commonly carries the baby and gives it to the mother only to be fed. This primate species is diurnal, totally arboreal and live in groups of 2 to 13 individuals. It feeds mainly on insects, some fruits and tree sap.

Visit Animal Rescue ZooAve and learn more about the Tufted Ear Marmoset.